Working with Pronouns

Last week we looked at pronouns. Remember, pronouns are small words that we use to replace nouns. After a noun is introduced in a sentence we can use a pronoun to refer to the noun so we do not keep repeating the same word/noun again and again.

Pronouns are divided into groups depending on their role in the sentence. There are subject pronouns, object pronouns, possessive pronoun, demonstrative pronouns, indefinite pronouns and reflexive pronouns. Look subject and possessive pronouns more carefully for this activity:

Subject pronouns – are used when the pronoun is the subject of the sentence.

- I, you, she, he, we, they, it

Possessive pronouns – show ownership

- my, your, his, her, its, our, their

Here are some sentences from our stories this week. Try to change the repeated (underlined) nouns with the correct pronouns to make the sentence shorter and easier to understand. Notice that without pronouns we have to repeat nouns often. Answers are in the appendix.

1. 32-year-old Tim Bosma was killed after posting Tim Bosma's pickup truck for sale online and taking a test-drive with two men.
2. Tim Bosma's widow says Tim Bosma's widow is trying not to fall apart, for the sake of Tim Bosma and his widow's two-year-old daughter.
3. Millard comes from a well-known aviation family and set flying records when Millard was a teenager.
4. Canadian astronaut Chris Hadfield is back on earth and Chris Hadfield says Chris Hadfield's body is confused and banged-up after Chris Hadfield's five-month stay in space.
5. Chris Hadfield says Chris Hadfield is dizzy at times and that Chris Hadfield's body feels as though it's gone through the wringer.
6. During Chris Hadfield's stay in space, Hadfield became something of a media star. Chris Hadfield not only tweeted photos, Chris Hadfield also talked to schoolchildren, strummed Chris Hadfield's guitar and made videos about daily life on the station.
7. Chris Hadfield says Chris Hadfield's use of social media won't end with Chris Hadfield's return to Earth.

Transcripts of Weekly news stories

	MAY 17 TH WEEKLY NEWS STORIES	TIME
Introduction	Hi, this is Carla Beynon. You're listening to Learning English with CBC for May 17 th .	0:00
Story 1	Two people are recovering in hospital after a dramatic shooting in northwest Calgary. Police officers had tracked a suspicious vehicle to a bank in Crowfoot Crossing. When they approached the SUV, the driver tried to escape by pulling onto the sidewalk. He hit an elderly couple, then stopped and backed over the woman again. That's when a police officer shot the driver. The woman and the suspect are both in hospital. Alberta's Serious Incident Response Team is now investigating whether the officer's actions were justified.	0:08
Story 2	The murder of an Ontario man has led to public sadness and sympathy. 32-year-old Tim Bosma was killed after posting his pickup truck for sale online and taking a test-drive with two men. His widow says she is trying not to fall apart, for the sake of their two-year-old daughter. Hamilton police say Bosma's body was found this week, burned beyond recognition. A Toronto man, 27-year-old Dellen Millard, has been charged with first-degree murder. Millard comes from a well-known aviation family and set flying records when he was a teenager.	0:48
Story 3	Canadian astronaut Chris Hadfield is back on earth and he says his body is confused and banged-up after his five-month stay in space. He says he is dizzy at times and that his body feels as though it's gone through the wringer. Hadfield held a news conference from Houston Thursday just a few days after returning from the International Space Station. During his stay in space, Hadfield became something of a media star. He not only tweeted photos, he also talked to schoolchildren, strummed his guitar and made videos about daily life on the station. He says his use of social media won't end with his return to Earth. Hadfield says the goal was not to become famous -- but to teach people about space exploration.	01:29
